Coca-Cola Amatil earns award for people-first commitment

Coca-Cola Amatil has been recognised for its commitment to providing a flexible and family-friendly workplace at this year's inaugural ENERGYFEST19 Awards.

The Kids@Work program run by the Alcohol & Coffee business, earned Amatil the runner up award in the overall best employer category

The program, the brainchild of Alcohol and Coffee Marketing Director Sally Byrne, was highly commended for providing a tangible and visible example of Coca-Cola Amatil's commitment to providing a flexible, family-friendly and supportive environment for its employees.

"We recognise the additional challenges presented by the school holidays, and along with the option to work from home, the Kids@Work program gives Coca Cola Amatil's employees the flexibility they need, when they need it most," Sally Byrne said.

The ENERGYFEST19 Awards recognise Australian and international organisations, and leaders for cultural leadership through employee engagement and experience.

"We've had 100 per cent positive feedback from children and parents so far. Our program gives children, aged 3 to 12 years, the opportunity to make new friends, and meet the people their parents work with - it's a way for children to connect to that mysterious place their mum or dad disappears to every day."

About Kids@Work Program

The Kids@Work program was launched in 2016 within Coca-Cola Amatil's Alcohol and Coffee business and in January 2019 was opened up to Coca-Cola Amatil Head Office employees at North Sydney.
